

Give The Newlyweds Across The Street A Run For Their Money.

It only took eight minutes for James and Anna to rekindle the romance. After 27 years of marriage and three kids, today isn't just any old Tuesday. Today is the first day they've been alone together since their youngest son left for college. Now there's no more worrying about whether they'll have to put their relationship on the back burner or when they'll have time alone together. The house is paid off. The cruise is booked. It's just the two of them. Now all that's left is to celebrate their newfound freedom. With all the time in the world to focus on each other, there's nothing standing in the way. Here's to more Tuesdays.
